ADDRESS..... ..

TEL..... ..

COLOUR.... Mid-amber with old gold highlights *.....

.....

NOSE.... Quite big-bodied & pungent, intense, musky and perfumed with a homemade blackcurrant jam aroma(!); with water, the wood opens out - sandalwood, vanilla, some spice and a hint of dark chocolate

.....

PALATE.... Quite big-flavoured and of good body, with notes of cocoa and chocolate, spice and luscious, ripe orange

FINISH.... Long and round, with a note of creamy coffee - macchiato, some dried orange peel and yet retaining a mouth-watering zingy, citrus zestiness.

SWEETNESS..... 4 ..... PEATINESS..... 2 ..... PRICE..... 4 .....

WATER... ..

NOTES....Dob. Tasted at Glenmorangie House at Cadboll with Annabel Meikle, the company's Sensory Whisky Creator. Limited in its output, this is the flagship of the revamped range from the company, the last 25 yo they released being the 1963 in 1988. A late night, supping whisky of elegance and style;
contemplative and decadently relaxing.

.....*I apologise, the colour may not be accurate, when I tasted this, all the natural light had gone.....
